New bar and dining room opening October 2010

Made in Camden, a brand new bar and dining room, will launch next month. As unpretentious, informal and vibrant as the local area, Made in Camden will open throughout the day and into the night. As well as lunch and dinner (including a pre-performance fixed-price menu), Made in Camden will offer a great range of beers and wines for those who want to wind down after a Roundhouse show. Open 363 days per year, Made in Camden will be for audiences and for those who live and work nearby.

Made in Camden will rely heavily on local talent. Designer Michael Sodeau and Head Chef Josh Katz grew up in the area. The bar will be the only local stockist of all of Camden Town Brewery's beers while nearby Bibendum will supply the wines.

Situated at the front of the Roundhouse but with its own dedicated entrance, the arresting new interior echoes the existing light-industrial style of the Grade II listed performing arts venue with its use of commanding steel pillars, natural wood, and zinc and granite bar tops. The sensitively designed building strikes an intelligent balance between the contemporary and the historical, combining original features with modern urban design to enhance space. Floor to ceiling windows looking out on to Chalk Farm Road flood the room with light.

Made in Camden's menu, drinks and wine list are being devised to match the diversity and high quality of the work that appears on the Roundhouse stage. Well-versed in classic refined French cuisine and earthy Mediterranean styles, Head Chef Josh Katz has created a menu with an emphasis on light, seasonal ingredients. Great coffee, bar snacks, cakes and pastries as well as brunch at the weekend will be served.

All profits from this neighbourhood restaurant will be fed back into The Roundhouse Trust, supporting its artistic activities and work with 11-25s.

About the Roundhouse

From modest Victorian beginnings, as a steam-engine repair shed, to legendary cultural venue, the Roundhouse has an enviable heritage. Today it offers audiences of all ages new and extraordinary experiences in live music, theatre, circus and new media – with more than a million people attending performances since the building reopened in 2006. The Roundhouse also delivers creative projects for 11-25s, including radio, music production, drama, circus, poetry, TV, sound engineering, photography, VJ skills and much more.

Made in Camden is managed by the Roundhouse. All profits will support The Roundhouse Trust which, as a charity, helps over 3,000 young people every year realise their creative potential.
